

I feel that this huge demand for candidates and committees to have to raise money, is not fair to the nation. That means that only rich people will ever be able to afford to run for President of the United States. This candidacy should not have financial barriers. There are some great leaders in the middle and low class. If that's the case then, Cal Works and other Federally funded programs for low income should wave the financial requirement. Just like the Budget Mobile free phone service, EBT card holders get a free phone and service for a year. Than I believe I should be exempt from the financial requirements. I also feel that I should qualify for interview clothes, because after all, the presidency is a job position that I'm applying for. I should have the ability to have the same media time that the rest of the candidates are getting. This lack of media attention is discrimination against me because I'm poor and I want to campaign and debate with these presidential candidates, but can't afford to because I receive for my kids the Calworks benefits. I know I have a very good chance of winning this election. Unfortunately, the FEC is failing to address this issue. I'm also a victim of identity theft.

Comments provided by :
Morales, Virginia